Monarch Butterflies

Monarch butterflies are orange and black. Every fall, millions of monarchs in the eastern United States and Canada take a long trip. They fly south to the mountains of Mexico. Some fly more than 2,000 miles! This long trip is called a migration.

In Mexico, the monarchs cluster together on fir trees to stay warm. In the spring, they fly north again. Monarch caterpillars eat only milkweed plants. Planting milkweed in your yard is a great way to help monarchs.
